We congratulate the new administration, and are pleased that, after some post-poll tensions, political parties have followed legal channels in confirming the election results, which has not been accepted by all candidates. We applaud political leaders on all sides for their public statements recognising the importance of the gains made by Somaliland and the fact that Somalilanders have once again chosen their own representatives through peaceful electoral democracy and we look forward to a continuation of the process and no longer hold the semi-delayed parliamentary election, which should be held in tandem with local council polls in 2019.
