MEMORIAL WORK EXHIBITION

This showcase connects research by members of the Urban Lab Steering Committee. It positions creative outputs as entry-points for understanding complex evidence.

The presentations span across disciplines and geography. The range of materials reveal a multidisciplinary approach to ideas of memory.

Contributions have come from scholars across UCL in the research areas of architecture, geography, political science, planning, critical heritage studies, history and anthropology.

Located in Stratford at the UCL East Campus, the Urban Room is an experimental exhibition space for students, researchers, artists, and community members.

Based on the idea of an 'urban room' as a forum for community-based debate and dialogue, the UCL Urban room brings together academic research and lived experiences of city residents to inspire meaningful education for our students and visitors.

Together, the Urban Room and Memory Workshop are supported by The Bartlett Faculty of Built Environment and the School for Creative and Cultural Industries at the University College London.

The Urban Room hosts and facilitates events, projects, workshops. To book the Urban Room, fill out our Application form here.
