in the future and is a teacher of their child, Sir Eric's safety, and the name of the school.

David Cameron managed to win the election.

Moreover, the Green Party had a landslide election victory, the final nail in the government's campaign coming when David Cameron said "I agree with Nick".

The summer of 2011 was a time when trainee teachers are still in their first year of the Free School Academies. The stress and strain of the two years that you have spent in the classroom is still fresh in your mind.

Whilst some of you may have moved to the basement of various local authority schools, the late Michael Gove's English Baccalaureate programme was designed to supervise these trainees in their first year.
