Survey of English Usage

Annual Report 1984-85

1. General

This year witnessed the publication by Longman of A Comprehensive Grammar of the English Language by four scholars closely associated with the Survey: Professor Sir Randolph Quirk (founder and first Director of the Survey), Professor Sidney Greenbaum (its present Director) Professor Geoffrey Leech, and Professor Jan Svartvik career by working at the Survey, compiled the index of 113 pages.

The new grammar is the climax of twenty years of collaborative work by the four authors. Building on A Grammar of Contemporary English, acknowledged since its publication in 1972 as the standard reference work in the field, it is an even more comprehensive synthesis of and manustical description of the Budish landereds

3. The Year's Work

Sylvia Chalker, Oonagh Sayce, and Tom Lavelle have continued to work on first-stage grammatical analysis; some analysis was also undertaken them they have analysed fifteen texts, bringing the total of texts analysed and filed so far to 152 (66 written and 86 spoken). Susan Boase transcribed four spoken texts and provided them with prosodic conference. Janet Whitcut lectured in Delhi on a tour sponsored by the British Council. Professor Akimoto, who spent a year at the Survey, gave a paper at the LACUS conference.

4. Publications

We occasionally fail to record publications. Scholars who have used Survey material are urged to send offprints to the Survey. If publications from previous years have not been listed, please let us know. We keep lists of Survey publications, and we bring them up to date periodically.

We do not list reviews (unless they are review articles) or articles in newspapers or popular magazines.

The Survey has an extensive collection of offprints on all aspects of modern English Language and in related fields. We welcome
