Adam's recollection of his social media friend's comment fits within a broader homonationalist narrative, wherein queerness and Muslimness are pitted against each other as naturally opposing in the battle for human rights. According to this comment, Adam had betrayed his community, as Islam was an existential threat to the queer cause.

Adam and Rafiq believe that this sort of religious bigotry is grounded in a certain "defensiveness" queer people may have due to years of oppression at the hands of religion, specifically the Church. While this may be true, the effect of discriminatory attitudes and actions can be detrimental to individuals' mental health and well-being.
