world. They also want to work in a connected environment that ensures that UCL and UCLH work together in their primary partnership to ensure that the advances that are made enhance patient care and provide the right environment for research and teaching.

or if it was strictly financial.

12.9. The Dean of the Faculty of Brain Sciences responded to members concerns by noting that this move is academically driven, seeking to provide the space that is required to grow and meet the ambitions for IoN and the DRI. He responded that acute inpatient work could be undertaken at the QSH site, and outpatient work elsewhere. The Dean also made it clear that the dual hub would be continued over time, and that arrangements with UCLH around options to buy more space in 5-UCLH.

12.10. The Provost responded to members comments by noting that the options available were complex and required full and transparent engagement in order to reach a balanced and pragmatic conclusion, easy options were not available if the academic ambitions of the IoN and DRI were to be met. The Provost noted that this is a complex and difficult decision, and assured members that the mood of AB would be fairly and accurately reported to Council as they make their decision. The Provost also noted that there was a further meeting that he would attend on Monday 16th October with the PIs to discuss the proposals.
