cases. It was still intended that UCL operate as a campus-based university, though modelling of possible mitigations was underway for overseas students, who might be unable

90.5. It was noted that the discussions on the future of AC were still ongoing, though it was likely to remain broadly similar to its current role. It may focus on higher matters of oversight, such as compliance with Office for Students (OfS) conditions of registration, leaving EdCom to focus on more specific educational matters. However, it was important to emphasize that EdCom was working well and to ensure that it had a clear remit to ensure that it continued to do so.

90.6. Agreed: that EdCom endorsed the paper and the position outlined therein. The paper should now be updated as necessary following the discussion and a communications strategy developed to ensure effective engagement with the Provost, SMT, AB and other key stake-holders.
